

Adam A. Hernandez

December 27, 1983 - February 27, 2015

Adam was a rich man. While he may not have had money, he had all the things in life that were far more important. He was a loving husband, son, father, uncle and brother and best friend. He had found the love of his life with Kelly, his wife. He was a father to their two boys Vincent and Nicholas. His sister Carissa was his best friend. He was an amazing uncle who loved his nieces Alicia and Adrianna like his own children. He was so excited when he learned he was having another niece Arabella. He wanted to be there for her birth in July. Adam was a friend to everyone. He never judged anyone and accepted all people just as they were. He never once asked anyone to change. Adam was an extremely gifted musician. There was not an instrument on earth that Adam could touch where he couldn't make magic happen. He was a true entertainer. Adam's specialty was the drums. He could play those drums like no other. He touched so many people in his short life. His spirit will live on forever in those that knew and loved him. May God keep him in his arms for all of eternity. Until we meet again, we love you always and forever. All your loving friends and family.
