“ When I got home today, after the funeral, I didn't feel like doing much. It was overcast and I was sad. But I decided to go outside and work on a few projects. There was a beautiful cool breeze and the sun was bright. It was a good day. I will always remember AJ. He taught me many songs and I will treasure our singing gigs. Especially at the Sterling House Assisted Living Center where I first met AJ. I am so very sorry for your loss. I miss him too but he will want me to carry on and continue singing for the dear folks. Music brought us together.

“ Truly one of the most enduring examples of what a real man should aspire to be. We as children looked forward to their (Uncle Jay & Aunt Kathy) visit every year. Our reunions will have an overwhelming vacuum of silence without the sweet mellow tones of that fiddle. For now he plays for the one True King in heaven, in a band comprised of Angel like himself. I will forever cherish the moments we had together.

I'll never forget the excitement I felt when Uncle Jay and Aunt Cathy would drive up. I loved to sit and sing with him and my other uncle's who have also gone home. I will miss you. Love your niece. Tammy
