My mother's tenacity was what helped her through her life; she did it her way with the grace of God. Being a single parent, was a challenge she handled well. My mom worked over 40 years at Gephardt's Chile canning co. she worked her way up to management plus working nights as a waitress to support not only me, but her three siblings along with my great grandmother and grandmother. It was not easy for her, but she managed to care for all of us. Her tough love was difficult to handle sometimes, so there was always drama at our home with that said my mother taught me self reliance. She also was devoted to her parish of Immaculate Conception for many years as a Eucharistic minister until her health started to decline. My mother was the Good Samaritan in the barrio not only on the west side, but also in the Victoria courts. My mom had a three wheel bicycle, that she used to pick up what people discarded and she would then fix, clean, and give the things to the single mother's in the projects. The last few months were a blessing for my husband and I to care for my mom as her health declined. Reconciliation, healing took place, my mom and I bonded as that had been my prayer for a long time. My life was better because of my mom. I wish to thank each and every one of our friends for all of their support. Survivors include daughter: Lydia Gonzales Roger
