“ I held baby Joseph in my arms, alongside his mother and father, he was a perfect baby. Almost ready for this world. He was warm and fragile.

I had planned to spoil him, as only a grandfather could, taking him fishing, playing catch, and many other activities.

I was waiting for his arrival with great anticipation. But now, instead, I will be telling him goodbye.

At a time like this, the biggest question on everyone's mind is "Why.," I wish that I had the answer and that I knew the right words to comfort Darlis and Kevin and extended family members. Please know that. Sylvia and I share your sorrow and that time will be merciful and help ease your pain.
