“Fiercely independent and just as beautiful, Barbara always lived her life the way she wanted - and that included being an important part of all of ours. She will forever be a doting Aunt to her sister Alfa Mae’s daughters and their families, all who will always adore and love her so much.

With an elegance and style that was definitively “Barbara”, she will always be remembered for her perfectly coiffed blonde hair, impeccable outfits, glittering rings and necklaces, and more. Beyond her effortless glamour, Barbara was also incredibly creative and artistic. We all have at least one beautiful afghan and watercolor painting created by Barbara and her perfectly manicured hands. Her creativity and imagination was passed down to her nieces who she would craft with and teach how to sew and crochet (some with more success than others!). She could create something from nothing, with many school projects and summer activities created from everyday objects and turned into something magical under her guidance. She also shared her love of classic movies and musicals, specifically Rodgers and Hammerstein films, and of course a family favorite, Seven Brides for Seven Brothers.

She also had a passion for adventure, and traveled all over the world. But even while away, Barbara always had her family in her heart. The best part of her travels was always when she would return, not just because of the surprises she came back with, but because she was home. For some of us lucky ones, she would even bring us along for some of her adventures.

Barbara will always be known for quick wit and honesty. Never one to hold back her opinions, you could always count on her to speak the truth. Some might say a little too honest, but her sparkling blue eyes and smile would quickly make up for anything too honest that may have been said. Always loyal and steadfast, when anyone needed her, Barbara was there. Many times showing up exactly when she needed to, almost as if she had an intuition of when we needed her most.

Her family meant everything to her, just as she does to them. She could be found in the center of every family gathering, holiday and birthday, and never forgot to send a card. We will all miss receiving her cards addressed and signed with her beautiful handwriting, always closed with "Love, Aunt Barbara".

Brave, beautiful and strong until the end, she fought hard to be with us for as long as she could. There will always be a tremendous piece missing without her, but she will always be a part of each of us through each beautiful memory. Barbara lived and loved with an independence we should all aspire to, and we are so lucky that she chose to be such a big part of our lives, and for so long. I know she is watching over us now just as she did in life, with wisdom and love and maybe just a few well-meaning critiques.
