“ Dear Stephanie:

I cannot imagine the pain you're feeling over the sudden loss of Bryan.

I was so stunned hearing the news that I began searching my memory for the last time Bryan and I chatted.

It was a relatively quick phone conversation and I remember there were parts of the conversation that made me laugh, and that made my day so much better.

As you said, that was the thing about Bryan. He had such an easy way of approaching people and simply striking up a conversation. Even after his workday, Bryan would take the time to walk across the street when he'd see me pushing a lawn mower or see Keith working in the garage.

Bryan's ability to have a conversation about nothing in particular on the spur of the moment was brilliant. He had that gift. It was his way of expressing an act of kindness, of simply reaching out.

I will miss those acts of kindness tremendously.

I recently came across these words of sympathy that someone else wrote long ago, and they seem appropriate during this painful time for you:

Your love was true and will never die; it changes form. So much has changed, but so much will always be.

To Stephanie and all of Bryan's loved ones and friends, you are in my thoughts and prayers.

Karen
