“ I first met Carissa when we both worked at USAA in the early 2000s...I quickly found her to be so fun to talk to and work with due to her quirky and highly intelligent personality. She made work there fun but also balanced it with huge talent and an ability to make even mundane tasks engaging. When I started with WellMed I was so excited to find that she also was working at the organization. I was able to reconnect with her after so many years and she was the same...a fun person who cared for others. I regret not connecting with her more these last couple of years and I truly am going to miss her. My heart goes out to her family and friends.

“ I don't work at WellMed. I didn't go to her church. She reached out to me when she found out that I was going to be alone the week of Christmas. She asked me wife for my contact information and asked me to dinner and a movie. First off...I have never met a redhead that I got along with...and then to get me off the couch binging Netflix with my fur babies....that was something...but I went. Had a fabulous time. We were friends from then. When the Cowboys played, um lost...we were texting. Hopefully she can cause some divine intervention and talk to God, Jesus, Saint Peter Paul of Mary (😂😂😂) and create some job aids or new SOPs for the Cowboys and get them into the Super Bowl, and win, bc it is always on or close to my birthday. Go Carissa, Go. We miss you soooooo much. ❤️

“ Though I’ve been friends with her mother, Bonnie for quite some time, I didn’t “meet” Carissa until Bonnie had a stroke some years ago and she responded to a question regarding her mom’s health. We began communicating and became Facebook friends. Clarissa was always concerned about her parents and tried to help them in both big and small ways. Her intelligence, kindness and sense of humor came out in conversations and in her Facebook posts. So did her love of animals, especially cats. I shall miss all of those qualities and her genuine niceness. I was shocked and very saddened by Carissa’s passing and my heart is breaking for her parents. May God comfort them and all who loved her.
