“ Chris and I went to high school together but became great friends as adults. When we'd take a picture we'd call it a singer sandwich because I sing as well. We were always saying we needed to do a duet on stage, but we never got around to it.

I still can't believe he's gone and that I can't just send him a text anymore.

My condolences to his family, especially his daughter and son!!!!

Eternal peace grant him Lord God!

Love you forever Chris!!!!

“ I met Chris on a trip to San Antonio in summer of 2021, visiting from Michigan. Altho, only meeting once and hanging out for a few hours with friends Gina and Scott, you would never have thought we had just met. He was so funny and kind. He is singing with the angels now and making the best music in heaven. It was only our privilege to know him for just a little while. His suffering in silence in over and that should be our peace, to know he's ok now. It doesn't erase the pain of loss, but somewhere down the road it might help. Bless his family and his kids as they go thru life now without him present, but know he really is always with them. His memory will live in within all who loved him and his music will continue..... Whether it's here or up there! ❤️
