

David Dean Casablanca

December 31, 1959 - April 12, 2016

David Dean Casablanca was one of the most loving and humble souls on the planet. To just have known him was to be lucky, but to have loved and been loved by him was to truly be blessed. He was always willing to help someone in need, putting others before himself. He focused on what mattered most, his family. Always full of life, pushing the limits, and daring to do what others were afraid to, David lived by a motto, "Runnin' Down a Dream". Although his journey through life was not always easy, he persevered and achieved his lifetime dream of opening his infamous shop, "Machine Alley". This was all made possible with the love and support of his wife, Mary Lou Gallegos and his daughter, Samantha Casablanca. David was called on by the Lord on April 12, 2016 to finally be reunited with his beloved brother, Chuck Casablanca. He was born on December 31, 1959 in San Antonio, Texas where he resided until his journey ended. He is survived by his mother, Delia, his sisters, Sylvia and Debbie, all his nieces and nephews, and his best friend and protector, Fatty.
