“ As her cousin, I have many warm and loving memories of Elia. I especially remember that as young girls, we would go to church every Sunday with our grandmother, and sit with her in the last pew in church. I would sometimes doze off, but Elia never did. My grandfather was an Elder and he sat in the very first pew. We attended Betel Presbyterian Church. Many of the church members were our relatives and those who weren't our blood relatives were like as if they were part of our family. As children, it was easy to feel that sense of belonging to a church family every day, not just in Sunday's. We also grew up surrounded by a large extended and tight knitted family. Family, God, and church were the sources for the values that guided the larger family. Elia lived her life according to those learned family values. She practiced love, care, humility, kindness, gratitude, and acceptance toward all of God's children all her life.

“ I've known Joe Reyes about as long as I've known my husband since they have been friends for years. If you know Joe, you know him to be kind and a better friend my husband could not know. Joe inherited these wonderful qualities from his mom. I had the pleasure of meeting her on a few occasions. I remember spending Thanksgiving with Joe and his family including his mom and dad when Joe invited new Air Force recruits into his home. His mom was always kind and hospitable to everyone she met. The picture posted is exactly how I remember her, smiling and sweet. God's speed Mrs. Reyes.
