Yvette's life was an inspiration, as she attended college later in life and graduated Cum Laude from St. Mary's University in 1994 and received her MBA in 2019. However, her career did not define her. Jesus and family were at the heart of Yvette's life, and she treasured the moments spent with her children and beloved grandchildren. They brought her immense joy and were a constant source of pride. In addition, Yvette enjoyed the company of her friends, whether it was sipping wine in Fredericksburg or hosting game nights, she always wanted her home to be a welcoming haven, a place where friends and family gathered to celebrate life's special moments.

She had a deep unwavering faith and believed wholeheartedly that upon her passing, she would be welcomed to heaven. This conviction brought her immense comfort, and she shared this faith with her family and friends, instilling a sense of peace and hope in their hearts. As we remember Yvette, we celebrate her adventurous spirit, her loving heart and her unshakeable faith. She leaves behind a legacy of love and cherished memories that will continue to inspire and uplift all who knew her.

“ The good Lord lent us an Angel for a while, I wish it could have been longer. I have known Yvette for 22 years and I have valued our friendship from the beginning. I thank God, for the laughter, the jokes and the long conversations we shared over the years. She had an incredible loving heart. I spoke to her on the phone right before she left the hospital. I called her and when she answered, she said, "dont freak out" and i interrupted and said. "let me guess, your pregnant!" (Not knowing the day before, she had had a heart attack. She laughed hysterically. To Jennifer, Amanda ,George and family, I am deeply sorry for your loss. I will miss the laughter, the jokes, the fabulous conversations we had. I will miss my friend, thanks Yvette, for your friendship, it meant the world to me. RIP, Angel. Dan Tranchina

“ A Memoir for My Sister-Friend, Yvette

I met Yvette in 1996, in a world of Nielsen TV ratings and deadlines—but what I truly discovered that day was not a coworker, but a kindred spirit. From the moment we met, something clicked. Our connection was instant, effortless, and deep. I couldn't stand the thought of her staying alone in a hotel, so I told her to come stay at my apartment. That simple invitation became the beginning of a sisterhood that would shape the rest of my life.

Yvette wasn't just my friend—she became family. She met my stepmom, Rocy, and my father, and they absolutely adored her. And as for my husband, Dale? She loved to tease him, calling herself his “sister wife” and making us all laugh until we cried. That was Yvette's magic—her humor, her warmth, her ability to make everyone feel seen, loved, and completely at home.

She wrapped herself around my family like a warm embrace. My daughter Yasmeen became her adopted goddaughter, and Yvette became a cherished part of every Thanksgiving dinner and summer vacation. Her yearly visits were traditions that felt like gifts—gifts I now treasure even more deeply.

Though life took us down different paths for over 14 years, it never managed to break the bond we built. She was steady. She was loyal. She always kept in touch, even from afar—sending love through seasons of joy and hardship. She walked with me through cancer, through accidents, and through the grief of losing both of our mothers. We shared everything—tears, prayers, struggles—but mostly, we shared laughter. Beautiful, healing, sacred laughter. And prayer. Always prayer.

Yvette was the truest friend I've ever known. Her heart was deep and wide and endlessly generous. She could brighten any room, lift any spirit, and carry burdens like they were feathers. I wish the world could stop and know her like I did—know the brilliance of her joy, the purity of her loyalty, the strength of her love.

Today, my heart aches with missing her. But even in sorrow, I am thankful. Thankful to have known a friend so rare, so real, so radiant. I carry her with me always. And I lift her beautiful daughters in prayer, because I know exactly how deeply she loved them—how fiercely she prayed over them, dreamed for them, and poured herself into their lives.

Yvette, you were my sister in every way that mattered. I love you forever.

“Oh Sis, this hurts sooo bad to see you leave us so soon. My heart cries so hard every day as I remember you taking the blame when you DID NOT DESERVE IT. When we were so little we held hands as we went to go visit those old neighbors. Ill always cherish that memory. We were mischievous and thicker than thieves, so young! You and I found out together that you were adopted. Did not know what it meant but, YOU WERE ADOPTED! I hope my house is next to yours in heaven. Until then sis, I will be here waiting my turn. I LOVE YOU AND MISS YOU SIS ❤️ DENNIS
