“ I became a volunteer at Poets Walk Memory Care last April. On my second visit, I noticed a precious lady sitting alone and I sat down next to her and asked her what her name was. She said, "Gloria, but you can call me Glo." I asked her that day if she wanted to walk outside in the garden and she said yes. We spent a long time that day looking at the flowers and enjoying God's creations. Glo was always in the big room where the activities took place and she was usually a very willing participant in whatever was going on. She used to love holding up the Spanish flashcards and "teaching" me the words--she didn't realize the answers were on the card, so I always got them right! She was very positive and would encourage me by saying, "Good! See, you're learning!" Just two weeks ago, I sat with her and Nora on the bench by the aviary and we visited for over an hour, talking and laughing. Glo was one of my favorites because she enjoyed talking and socializing. I was very sad last Thursday when I was there and found out she was in the hospital, and then later in the day, learning she had gained her angel wings to heaven. I just love the beautiful photo of her with the hat. She will always hold a special place in my heart. RIP sweet Glo.
