“ I remember the day we were married. It was on our oldest son, Daniel Powell's 8th birthday. January 17th, 1998. And I was pregnant with our one & only precious baby girl, Amrah T. Jordan. Born March 16th, 1998. We both cried thru out our whole wedding ceremony. Northern one of us could believe we'd finally found our soulmate and that after all we'd been thru the years before, that we were finally getting married. It was a rough road getting there but we were FINALLY, FINALLY making it happen. You were so damn gourgous in my eyes. Even tho our ages were years apart, it didn't make a bit of difference. You had loved me since you were 9 years old, and I never realized who I thought only to be like a lil brother and my best friend, I too had been in love with you since you were about 15. Others could see it in us, but we didn't until a few years later. And BAM!!! It hit us so damn fast & hard we didn't see it coming. From that moment on we were inseparable. But yes there were some rough patches the last few years of your life, but we were in the works of attempting to reunite . But your life was cut short before we were able to get things worked back out. Sometimes even soulmates go their own ways, but their connection to one another no one can damage. For our love for one another was out of our hands. Our destiny had already been foretold that we'd always be as one thru out our lives. And not a day goes by that you don't cross my mind. I love and miss you so very much. You were my world, and you still are to this very day. You always said they'd have to rip me from your cold dead hands before you'd ever let me go. And you were right.
R.I.P. My Love. Until we meet and become as one once again. I know you'll be waiting for me.
SINCERLY your wife,
Thaedra T. Jordan

It's coming up on 11 yrs now that you've been gone, and it only gets harder for me with each passing moment of every day. I still see your gorgeous face, with those eyes and smile that caught my attention all those years ago. I heard your voice, your laughter, and still remember the way you loved me. These are things I know will never leave me. And am grateful to be able to carry them with me everywhere I go. I told you I'll live you forever and that's something that shall remain true and will still be there once we're back together as one someday. You may not physically be here but I make sure your memory will carry on thru the rest of my living years and that each new life that comes into this family shall know your name and who you are to them. I make sure they know the loving and caring man you were and the impact you placed upon their existence within this family. I let them know the love we shared between each other and the depths at which it still stakes its claim. I loved you then, I love you now, and I'll love you for an eternity, as our souls won't be whole again until we're back together as one, as we once were.
SINCERELY, and always your wife,
Thaedra T. Jordan
