“Grandma shaped my life in ways that are too numerous to count. So many memories beginning with the songs she sang to me, the silver dollar pancakes, the sips of her coffee that made me feel all grown up. She made me believe I was beautiful, she made me believe I was smart and she even made me believe that I was a talented gymnast who could be just like Olga Korbut.

She moved to Milledgeville to support me after my divorce and helped me create a new home for my children. She was beautiful and talented, and instilled in me a love of design and art that has been a source of joy for my entire life.

She welcomed the love of my life into our family without reservation and made sure that Clint always knew that he was welcome and loved. I realized how generous and powerful this was when my own children began to choose and I strive to emulate her generosity and grace.

I hope that Tanner, Nick and AJ feel that same love and acceptance from me and that they know that this beautiful woman loved them as well.

That unconditional love extended to all of us- fierce support for Wesley during a difficult season in his life, pride in Carolyn's ability and strength raising a family as a military wife, her joy and laughter at William's stories and conversation, and her admiration of Sissy's success at her career while raising her girls.

I love her and will carry her in my heart always.
