“ I have so many memories with my grandpa growing up. I remember sleeping right between him and my grandma when I was little. I remember going fishing with my grandpa and that’s the first time I ever used chicken blood and boy was that smelly. I remember always dancing with him at family functions. He loved to dance! I really never wanted to get up and dance but he made it fun and I’m grateful for those times. I remember always talking to him about taking care of himself and he would always say “I know” in a funny voice and face. I remember him always saying “agua” in a deep funny voice. I remember the days we would all go to church together and go and eat afterwards. I will always cherish all those memories! Rest In Peace Grandpa. I love you always!

“ I've known Manuel, my first father-in-law, since I was 13. It's still shocking he's gone. I can definitely share that he loved coming over to eat whatever I had made for dinner, back in the days. Glad he felt welcomed enough to stop by like he did. We all know he loved his oldies and dancing, especially to Chubby Checker's, Let's Do the Twist! Boy, could he dance! Great memories with this man. He loved his kids & grandkids very much. He wasn't one to show his emotions, but that's where my mother-in-law/friend stepped in. (Still call her this). They balanced each other out. He will be terribly missed. Rest in paradise Manuel.

“ To those of you who knew my Tio Manuel know that he, like any Father would of his genre, knew the value of being all that he could be for his family....
