“ When Mark & Mary walked into my son’s life as freshmen in high school, they both became more than family to us. They were there beside him through all the hard times, the hospitalizations, even driving out in the middle of the night to find a bail bondsman. Mark was the brother Travis turned to, depended upon. He was the one person who was always there when needed.

I will never forget the time Travis and Mark went on a cross country trip following graduation and I got a call from the manager of a five-Star Arizona resort I had booked them into for a couple of nights. There appeared to be a problem with their Michelin-star restaurantthere were no hamburgers or chicken nuggets on the menu! Took a lot of talking and a very large tip to convince the manager to send out for McDonald’s! The restaurant was appalled but managed to conceal the bland meal quite nicely on their best china. McNuggets never looked so good! 😂

After Travis and I moved to Ireland 🇮🇪, Mark never missed a birthday. They were some of our best times together . In his honor, all his Irish friends and family here in The Kingdom will hold a traditional Irish wake on Thursday. Don’t worry.....the chef at Natterjacks, our local pub, will have his chicken nuggets waiting for him! Rest In Peace, my son! I will always love you!
