“ I've shared a lifetime with Grandma. I lived across the street from her for most of my life. She taught me to sew, to cook, to save my nickles and dimes. Traveled with her, camped out with her at our cabin and later in my tavel trailer, sitting next to a campfire and even spending Thanksgiving together at one of our favorite campsites, Inks Lake State Park, we took her boating with us and traveled to Idaho and California with her, went to Disneyland, and too many places to list. Spent so many mornings, days and nights with her sewing, helping her take apart upholstery, sitting and having coffee or beer at her kitchen table with her and Grandpa, making meals. She taught me a lifetime of lessons and traditions that echo throughout my daily life and are taught to my 4 children, her great grandchildren, that she loved. I was honored everytime I could introduce her to a new great grandchild and see how it lit her up. She lives still through me and my children. We honor her lessons and traditions. She will be missed but NEVER forgotten. RIP Grandma, we will see you on the other side.

Im attaching 2 of my favorite photos of Grandma and my oldest son, her oldest great grandchild, Shawn. The photo of her and him in our boat during a camping trip to Inks Lake, then again on my couch at home in Austin, 9 years later!
