“ Mom, It didn't take much thought to describe what you were to us all. One word is all that comes to mind. One word with true meaning to us all. Warrior!!! You feared nothing, you stood up to everything when we couldn't . You showed us how strength comes from the heart. None of us would be the good people we are today if it wasn't for you. You made us all who we are. You molded us , built us and kept us strong. You showed us the way and always picked us up when we fell. You always had our back . You always kept your promises. You were our nurse, our counselor , mediator and teacher. Our protector and our guide. You made every Christmas what it was supposed to be for us all. No matter how tired you were , you always made sure that Christmas village was put out for us all to see so you could be sure that we all could see the true meaning of Christmas thru your eyes. And we always did. You kept it real for us all . You brought us together even in the toughest times. You held us when we cried , you laughed with us when we made jokes. You fed us , you clothed us and you kept us warm. At dads side You made sure we knew what true love was . You taught us how to survive and be the people we needed to be in life. Exactly what you and dad were. A team. So mom, don't you worry, we all will carry the torch for you now. Your love and your memory will live in us all forever . I love you so much mom. I know your with grandma now, uncle Boyd and your life long friend Mary Ann, flying high and free with your well deserved wings which I know the good lord gave you as soon as you went thru heavens gates. So is this goodbye? No, it's just I'll see you later. I'll never say good bye to you, Not to my mom. In closing, from the deepest part of my heart, thank you mom for not letting me fall, thank you for making me the man I have become . Thank you so so much. I love u
