“ A True Story

Bunco is a cut throat business - and for some, betrayal comes easy

My innocent son, John, was having a good time and had a lot of lucky rolls - but all is not fair in love and bunco - At last John rolled his first bunco in the game - As all at the table, John, Grandma Dot, mom Sally, and Uncle Paul looked on, stunned - Paul grabbed the bunco - John felt hurt and betrayed by those who should have put John's hope and innocence before all else - So dismayed was John that he said, " You took my bunco, Uncle Meanie-Pants!" After the dust had settled, treachery and lost hope prevailed - However there were others, too, for whom the moniker was justly apt - No names shall be named, but think about certain ones who might be thought of by "Dot" or "Aunt M." All heartless grabbers!
