As a mail carrier, he became a familiar and cherished presence in the community, forming lasting friendships and touching the lives of many who came to know and love him. While working at the Postal Service and after retirement he owned and operated over 20 apartments.

He was a faithful and devoted servant of God, a loving husband, father, grandfather, and great-grandfather who always made sure they knew how deeply they were loved. He loved his family profoundly and instilled in them the importance of always putting God first and keeping Him at the center of your life. He was a generous soul who loved wholeheartedly and gave freely to everyone, always willing to help others in any way he could.
