“ I had the distinct pleasure of being Ray's co-worker for the past 28 years. I met Ray when I was a wet-behind-the-ears college grad and he willingly took this no-nothing engineer under his wing and was able to teach me many tricks of the trade. He never grew tired of my constant questions. This self-taught master of cad drafting was always quick with some quirky "Rayism" around the office; some little phrase or joke that he would repeat constantly, late into the night when we were working to meet deadlines. We would all be tired and ready to head home, but Ray's light-hearted comments and jokes, though not always rated PG, kept things upbeat and fun around the office. When I decided to start up my own office, I knew I wouldn't even attempt it if Ray wasn't willing to join me. We started that journey together 16 years ago and not once during that time did I worry about missing a deadline. I knew the G.O.A.T. draftsman had my back. Ray gave 110% effort all the time. Even when his health took a serious turn for the worse, he insisted on continuing to come into the office. In spite of the discomfort and pain, he was in the office less than a week before he passed. His last day in the office, he finished off two more jobs, typical Ray. His wit and smiling face will be dearly missed around the office. He has left some shoes that will NEVER be filled. Thanks for all of the great memories. Love you always.

“ Ray,
There are so many wonderful, quirky memories to choose, from being neighbors to becoming friends you always made us smile. The Boy always enjoyed hanging out with his buddy in the garage. He would stay for the afternoon just to watch what you were watching, do what you we're doing. He would talk about school and his choice and you would praise him or scold him, but he never complained.
I remember New Years Eve 2010, The Boy was out in his footsie pajamas with sparklers. He knew that you would always have them for him. Now you will be his sparkler in the sky. You were always caring and playful with me and Andrew. You made me laugh and sometimes your senses of humor got the best of me, but you laughed at me, then with me.
Those are memories I will cherish always.
We Love You and Miss You.
