“ For Roger,

*Angel's Wings
now take the place
of earthly foot-steps taken;
close to God, now
near His face
though far from us
still shaken
by the quickness of this passing.
God's child has gone to Heaven.
So smiling softly, 'tween our tears,
we see Roger in His Arms so dearly;
please, Lord, now in this time
don't let our hearts be hardened;
give us Grace to let us last
'til time has passed,
and we, too,
can come into Your Garden.
Amen.*

“ I worked with Roger for almost a year, and I got to know him well. I had a lot of respect for him because he always put his family first, and almost everyday he shared a different story of time spent with his wife, and Lil Roger. Roger's family was the center of his world! Roger was loved by everyone! Some of us get along better with some people, more than others... But, Roger got along well with everyone.

When I met Roger, I didn't know how to "read" him. He had that I'll-smack-you-upside-the-head look, and initially, he didn't smile very much... But, wouldn't you know? He was the first to step up, to offer a hand, and he gave me his number and said, "If you have any questions, you call me!"

Roger had a crazy sense of humor, and he was always ready (with his phone camera) to catch you looking your worst, at the most inopportune time! Roger would ask me to videotape him while he hid in the warehouse, to scare the hell out of Orlando, as Orlando walked in! Afterwards, we'd watch the video over and over, with uncontrollable laughter!

Although I hadn't talked to Roger in a couple of years, the memories and the laughter we shared, will live in my heart forever! ~ Alex Solis
