“ It's taken me a while to figure out what memory to share. There were so many that I will never forget. You were everything to me. My inspiration to be better and never let anyone or anything hold me back. From the first time you made me laugh to the moments you scolded me knowing I could do better. From the moments we tried to plan our kids to the day you baptized mine. You taught me how to live and be a free spirit, especially when I needed it most. So I guess the memories aren't of a single moment, but a lifetime of lessons, love and experiences that we shared. The stories I will tell your boys and grandchildren one day will always be part of my heart. Thank you for being you Sara and for always being my person, Taz, and always my Sunshine when I needed it.

“ Sara walter it's been a great life with you. I know you're watching over us. The last five years you been through so much. I'm happy you're not suffering anymore. I'm heart is broken that your gone. I'm happy that you're not in pain or tubes or struggling to get by anymore. You showed me how to relax and calm down with all my imperfections. You were the light to my darkness. You have shown me how to care and love someone so much that it hurts. I never thought I would be so heartbroken but you opened that side of me. You will be my only one and forever. I can't wait to see you again at the heavenly gates when I rejoin you. Sara you will be missed and never forgotten by me I promise that to you. As long that I've been with you you were a bad ass on the Harley fat boy low. Your favorite Harley was the 2012 Dyna with a tequila rose paint job. my goal in life is to find that bike and buy it in your memory. You took turns crazier than I did at Sturgis. You showed me how much you love to ride I fell in love with you. On the first day we met and married five months later. you are totally awesome and a bad ass bike rider. I know you learned off your family, but you did like to Chance every single thing. You had my heart from day one I will never forget our joke when I told you the day we met. When I got off of work and started drinking beer, then I saw you and I told myself I should have showered first. you were not an old biker chick you were the one that stole my heart body in my soul we will meet again, and I will be buried with you I promise you that. As I'm trying to sleep, I'm struggling knowing that 3/4 of my heart just left me for a better place that I'm happy for because you're not struggling at all. Sara you will be missed by many and most of all by me. I love you until the end of days. There is no other like you that can compare. Miss you so damn much. I want to hold you again. One day we will!
