“ Rest In Peace beloved cousin. We were raised like sisters with only a fence line between us. We did all the crazy, mischevious things that kids being raised on a farm did. We were clodhoppers on freshly farrowed rows, chasing horned toads in the blazing hot dirt, barefooted no less. We climbed to the highest limb of the Mulberry tree bringing down the fruit tucked on our clothes that we always got in trouble because the stains never came out, and had crazy China Berry fights. We told ghost stories and scared ourselves half to death. We looked intently for the lady in white that walked the road from the old Huisache tree and swore that someone was throwing rocks at the house(probably chinaberry balls falling on the roof). We played Hide and Go Seek and built our pretend houses under the mesquite trees, playing with our home made dolls and tin lids for plates. We bobbed watermelons in the old tank that was our private swimming pool. We had fun. Now you are in Heaven in the company of the best. Godspeed cuz, till we see each other again
