“ Scott was one of my best friends from the second grade all the way until today. A friendship that could pick up as though time never passed. He was funny and kind with the biggest giving heart. Memories from the lake and summer camp just add up over the years. He was a blessing in my life.

“ I was devastated when I heard this news. Scott was one of the best choir students I have ever had the pleasure of teaching. He had a wonderful God given talent & worked hard to be the very best singer he could be. He was always helpful and was such a fun person to be around. It was obvious how much he loved his family and I grieve along with them. Rest in peace, dear friend, and know you made this world a better place.

“ Scott was the reason I would walk into work every morning with a smile on my face! He always had some funny joke or story to tell me every single morning! Almost every day we would be on lunch at the same time and sit there for what seemed like 10 mins but really 1 hour just laughing at the craziest things that we encountered throughout our day at work. He knew about everything from the hurt to the joys in my life! He always had a listening ear and he always had a smile on his face. He was one of the greatest friends I could have ever asked for. He shined a light on even the darkest of days for me and it never mattered what he was going through, his goal was to laugh and smile in every circumstance. He is missed so much but he will NEVER be forgotten. Thank you Scott for all the smiles, all the talks, all the love and light you shared in my life! I know you are up there making fun of me for "never doing anything" 😂! I will pray for your family to find peace in all this! Watch over us and remind us every now and then that you are here within all of us! Thank you for always being you because you were an amazing human being and anyone who calls you friend is lucky!

“ Scott was like a big brother to me. He and my older brother, Steven, were best friends all through high school. They were quite the duo too. Scott towered over my brother making it look as if they were “the Jolly green giant and sprout.” That was how I referred to them. He spent a lot of time at our house over the years and grew to become part of the family. He was an amazing person and supported me through the toughest times of my life. I am so sad to hear of this and wish his wife, children, and family all the love in the world! May the Lord look over them and give them peace during this difficult time.
Love you, Scott!

I met Scott when he came to McHi. His mother, Susan, was one of our counselors; I was one of the assistant principals. I close my eyes and see Scott coming into my office to wait for his mother at the end of the school day. He would smile and ask me about my day. Then he would tell me about his classes. His focus would be the music that they were preparing to sing for competition. Through the years, we had many conversations. But I am most grateful for those conversation where Scott provided me with insights about being a teenager who towered above his classmates. Those insights helped me to listen carefully when students were sent to my office.

I pray that in this time of loss, Susan, Shannon, Sharon and his children are wrapped up in God's love. May God pour upon you His amazing grace and overflow you heart with peace.

What a legacy of love and joy Scott has left! May those memories encourage more smiles but also listening ears & hearts when others need a Christian friend. May all of you who loved him so deeply, find God's loving presence in every moment of every day. It's okay to be sad right now, but Scott's love in your hearts will never fade.

“Scott was considered a member of our family. He and our son Steven Davey shared many high school and church activities. They were inseparable. He brought light and laughs into our home whenever he walked through the door. He loved the Lord and sang heartfelt praises to Him in and out of church. We will always cherish our memories of Scott and are thankful for the time we had with him.
