She worked in a variety of roles including Daycare, Sewing Machine sales and Bookkeeping. But she loved being a home maker and took pleasure in creating a warm, inviting home. Sharon's passion was quilting. She loved to create beautiful, highly detailed wall quilts and full sized bed quilts. Many family and friends were given quilts uniquely designed and crafted for them. She was known to create quilts for people she met who she felt would benefit from one. Her sewing room remains alive with several projects that she had started.

Sharon had a loving, giving heart. She would reach out to people who needed help taking them under her wing and offering love, support and a caring ear. There are many young men and women who would say they were living better lives because of her. Her giving, caring nature was one of her best attributes.
